

Release of high-risk offender Bradley Cory KEENATCH

In the interest of public safety, the Calgary Police Service is issuing the following public information and warning in regards to the release of an inmate on completion of his sentence.

Bradley Cory KEENATCH, 33, was released to the Calgary community today, Thursday, November 2, 2017, after serving a 9-year sentence for aggravated sexual assault and break and enter with intent in Prince Albert, Sask. The sexual assault occurred on an adult female who was unknown to KEENATCH.

Previous convictions include assault with a weapon, assault causing bodily harm, common assault, uttering threats, break and enter, escape lawful custody, possession of a weapon, attempt to obstruct justice, mischief, possession of property obtained by crime and several breaches of court orders. All of his crimes have been committed in Saskatchewan.

KEENATCH will now be monitored by the Calgary Police Service High Risk Offender Program.

He is described as Indigenous, 5'9", 170 pounds, with a medium build, black hair and brown eyes. KEENATCH wears glasses and has tattoos of a bear claw on his left hand and "CORY" on his chest. A photo of KEENATCH is available on The City of Calgary Newsroom.

The Calgary Police Service is issuing this information and warning after careful deliberation and consideration of all related issues, including privacy concerns, in the belief that it is clearly in the public interest to inform members of the community of the release of KEENATCH.

Members of the public are advised that the intent of the process is to enable members of the public to take suitable precautionary measures and not to embark on any form of vigilante action.

NOTE: This information is released under the authority of section 32 the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, S.A. 1994 c.F – 18.5.
