

Critical worker benefit funding: total $465 million

1
PHASE

$367M
distributed to 289,800

workers

$355M on $1,200 payments

277,800
workers

~$156M on ~121,000 workers
in the health-care sector (hospitals, home care, hospices, emergency medical services, medical laboratories, mental health and addiction and continuing care and supportive living facilities)

~$36M on 27,800 workers
in the education sector

- public schools, private schools, private Early Childhood Services operators
- Benefitting educational assistants, bus drivers, custodians, and secretarial staff

$42M for 35,000 workers
in the social services sector

- disability services and preventative community services
- child intervention services
- certified early childhood educators
- seniors affordable housing facilities

~$121M on ~94,000 workers
in the private sector

- food manufacturing
- food and beverage stores
- health and personal care stores
- workers at gas stations
- workers in truck transportation
- couriers and messengers
- workers in warehousing and storage
- educational services workers working in First Nations communities
- health care and social assistance workers working in First Nations communities
- workers in physicians' offices
- workers in dentists' offices
- workers in other health practitioners' offices
- workers in medical and diagnostic laboratories

$12M to increase wages $2/hour

12,000
health care aides

in long-term care and designated supportive living facilities.
Announced in April 2020.

2
PHASE

$99M available to 76,500

eligible workers

up to $18.5M for the social services sector

14,300
workers

up to $80.3M for the private sector

62,200
workers