When to use this booklet

This booklet tells you what steps to take when:

- The other party is not someone to whom you are related by blood, adoption or marriage, or the parent of your child or with whom you lived in a relationship of interdependence (sometimes called common law);
- You have reason to believe that the other party will cause you physical harm;
- It would be dangerous for you to provide the other party with advance notice of your application; and
- You have chosen not to get a lawyer and will be representing yourself throughout the court process.

More than one person can apply for a Restraining Order – each person will be listed as a Plaintiff / Applicant. Also, the application can be made against more than one person – each person will be listed as a Defendant / Respondent. To make these instructions simpler, we will assume that there is only one applicant and one respondent.

Tip:

The instructions in this booklet are general and apply to most cases. There are cases where different rules apply. The Alberta Rules of Court tells you the process and procedure for all kinds of cases in the Court of Queen's Bench. You can find the Rules of Court in the library in your courthouse or at : www.qp.alberta.ca

Important things to know about Restraining Orders Made Without Notice

A Restraining Order is an order made by the court and enforced by the police. It will limit the contact the respondent (the other party) can have with you.

The Order will state that the respondent can have no contact, either directly or indirectly, and in person or by other means (for example, by telephone). The respondent will also be prevented from coming within a certain distance of certain places (for example, your residence or place of employment).

You should not contact the respondent during the time the Restraining Order is in place unless your order says that you can.

When court is over, you will have to have someone personally serve the respondent with a copy of the Restraining Order. Court staff and the police do not serve Restraining Orders.

You will have to come back to court to have the Restraining Order reviewed by a judge after the respondent has been served. Usually, this second court date is in about 2 weeks. At that point, the Restraining Order can be extended or terminated.

If you change your mind and want to end the Restraining Order early, you will have to make a court application on notice to the respondent.

Will you be allowed to apply without notice?

In almost every court application, the other party must be given notice of the application. You do this by serving them, which is by handing them copies of the court forms that you have filed.

A court application made without notice to the other party is called an ex parte application. There are some very limited cases where you can make an application without first serving the other party. One case where you can make an ex parte application is if it is an emergency in that your safety will at risk if you serve the other party ahead of time.

If your case is not an emergency, you may want to use our booklet "Applying for a Civil Restraining Order on Notice".

Getting Ready

Before you start to prepare your court forms, you should think about what kinds of documents you will need to prove your case. You will have to attach all of the documents to your application form, so you will need to collect them ahead of time.

Tips:

If you have made a report to the police, it can be helpful to attach a copy of the report.

You only have one chance to make your case to the court. The judge makes their decision using only the documents that are on the court file. Make sure you have all the information that the judge will need.

PREPARING YOUR COURT DOCUMENTS

At the beginning of every form

Fill in the following:

- Court File Number – Your file number as written on your other court documents (You may not have a file number yet.)
- The Judicial Centre, e.g. Edmonton
- The parties' full names
- Your complete address and phone number

Tips:

You may not want to put your own address and phone number on this form, if you think it will put you in danger. However, you MUST have an address on the form where court documents can be delivered to you. It is OK to use a friend's address or a work address as your address for service, so long as the people there know that the respondent may be coming there to deliver documents.

You do not have to put your phone number on this form if you do not want the respondent to have it.

Fill in the Statement of Claim

The purpose of this form is to provide a brief summary of the facts that support your court action. You do not have to set out all of the details, as you will do that in your Affidavit. You do need to provide the dates and places where events happened.

Normally, there is a fee of $250 to file a Statement of Claim. Because the only relief you are only asking for is a Restraining Order (and maybe costs), the filing fee is waived.

Fill in the Affidavit

The purpose of this form is to tell the court "what" you want, and "why". The Court wants to know what kind of an Order you are asking for, and your story. It is a summary of the "why" that supports what it is that you are asking for.

If you want the Court to know something, it has to be in this court form. You can't say anything to the Court that you haven't already written in your affidavit. You can't hand letters or documents to the judge that were not attached to this form when it is sworn.

When filling in the Affidavit, be sure to:

- Only state the facts that you know to be true
- Only state the facts that are relevant to what you are asking for
- Explain why your case is special or an emergency such that you should not have to serve the other party ahead of time
- Attach as exhibits copies of all the documents that you want the Court to see

The Affidavit is your evidence and the Court will use this to help makes its decision. There are serious consequences for not telling the truth in this form.

Tip:

Be specific when writing out your story. Write down what the respondent did and give dates whenever you can. For example:

Too vague

Fred is violent.

I am afraid of Sally.

John has made threats.

More Specific

Fred has slapped me and punched me several times in the last year. The last time was last Tuesday, when he punched me 4 or 5 times in the face.

I am afraid that Sally will come to my house when she is drinking and try to break down the door.

John has said to me that I had better watch my back.

How to choose and attach Exhibits to your Application for a Restraining Order form:

- Exhibits are documents that you attach because they support what you have said in your Application form. For example, if you made a police report, you might want to attach a copy of that report. Any documents that you want the court to see must be attached as an exhibit to your Application form. You will not be allowed to show the documents to the Judge in Court if they are not attached as exhibits to your Application form.
- Make sure your exhibits are relevant, that is that they have a logical connection to the application that you are making.
- Do not attach documents that are already on the court file.
- Think before you attach copies of text messages, e mails, diaries, or social media postings. If they are not relevant, the court may order you to pay costs.
- Exhibits are labeled - Exhibit "A", Exhibit "B", etc.
- Your exhibits must be legible and the photocopies must also be legible. The font must be about 12.
- The total number of pages of exhibits can be no more than 40.
- Number all of the pages of your exhibits, starting with the first page of Exhibit "A" and finishing with the last page of your exhibits.
- You must tab each exhibit, and label the tab with the exhibit letter. You can buy divider tabs at a stationary store, or you can use "post it" (or similar) notes to tab the exhibits.
- You must have a "Table of Exhibits" inserted between the signature page of the Application form and the first page of the exhibits. Your "Table of Exhibits" will contain a brief description of each exhibit, for example, Exhibit "A" – photo of hole in my front door.

Once you have finished filling in your Affidavit, you must have it sworn before a Commissioner for Oaths.

You may come to Resolution Services or the Clerk's office to have your Affidavit sworn. Bring identification with you when you come.

Tips:

Remember that you want your court documents to be as neat and easy to read as possible. The easier you can make the job for the judge, the better.

Make sure all of your pages have print only on one side (no double sided printing or copying!).

Your Affidavit must explain what each exhibit is.

If some of the documents you want to attach are smaller than a letter sized piece of paper (e.g. receipts or pay stubs), tape them to a piece of paper. You can tape more than one similar document to a sheet of paper, so long as they will all show when being photocopied.

You can group related documents as one exhibit. For example, all of your paystubs can be grouped as one exhibit.

Make sure that your exhibits are complete. For example, don't attach one page of a two-page letter.

Make sure to bring a photocopy of your exhibit(s) with you when you have your Affidavit sworn otherwise you may lose your original.

DO NOT photocopy your Affidavit until AFTER it is sworn.

Fill in the Restraining Order Without Notice form

Leave the date and Judge's name blank.

In the first paragraph of the Order, fill in your name.

In #1, fill in the respondent's full name and any addresses from which you specifically want the respondent to be kept away.

The judge will fill in the rest of the form for you.

Photocopy this Order on to green paper (staff at Resolution Services can do this for you).

Fill in the Statement of Description

Fill in the form with as much information as you have. If you do not know some of the information, just leave it blank.

FILING YOUR COURT DOCUMENTS

Make copies of the Statement of Claim and Affidavit

Remember that you should not make photocopies of the Affidavit until after you have had it sworn. After it is sworn, make 2 copies each of your Statement of Claim and Affidavit (plus all exhibits). Make one more copy for each extra respondent.

Go to the Court of Queen's Bench filing counter

Go to the filing counter at the Court of Queen's Bench and hand them your originals and copies of your Statement of Claim and Affidavit. They will stamp and keep the original copy of the forms. They will stamp and return your copies to you.

Tip:

Each court location has a different name for the counter that files these types of forms. Ask us, or ask one of the court staff where the proper filing counter is.

GOING TO COURT

Your court application will be heard by a Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench.

The Court of Queen's Bench can seem quite intimidating. Although the staff and judges try to make the court system as open and friendly as possible, there are still some basic things you should know going in:

- Dress for court in a neat and respectable manner;
- Be on time;
- Do not eat, drink or chew gum/tobacco in the courtroom;
- Remove your hat;
- Turn off cell phones, pagers and music devices;
- Make sure you have copies of all of your filed court documents;
- Make sure to bring a pen and paper to write down the judge's decision, name, room number and the date;
- Speak clearly and loudly when you are in court;
- Stand up when the judge is speaking to you or when you are speaking to the judge;
- Be respectful of the judge and refer to him/her as "My Lord or My Lady"; and
- Be respectful of the other party and do not interrupt them while they are speaking.

The Clerk at the filing counter will tell you which courtroom to go to.

In most court locations, when Regular Chambers is in session, Duty Counsel will be outside the courtroom. If you would like their help, speak to them before you go into court.

Sit in the gallery area of the courtroom. All conversation in the courtroom is recorded, so it is best to have any discussions outside. Once the judge comes in, you should not talk.

If you are in Regular Chambers, you will hear the judge say "Any ex parte applications?". You will see lawyers and others go to the front of the courtroom and speak to the judge about their applications. When you have the chance, you can go up too.

If you arrive after court has started, or are placed into a courtroom where another matter is going on, you may have to wait until the end of the scheduled cases to speak to the judge. Again, you will go to the front of the courtroom to speak to the judge.

Stand up to speak. Introduce yourself and hand one of the copies of the Application form and your Restraining Order to the Clerk to give to the judge.

Tell the judge briefly what you want (e.g. "I am asking for a restraining order"), then talk about the facts that you have written in your Affidavit and make any arguments you want to make.

If the other party has a lawyer, you must tell that to the judge.

The judge may ask questions.

The judge then gives their decision. If the judge says that they will grant a Restraining Order, give the Clerk the Order that you have prepared. The judge will sign it and the Clerk will hand it back to you.

Tips:

Regular chambers is a busy place and the judge will not be familiar with your file. Make sure you cover all of the important points when you are given your chance to speak.

When the judge is giving their decision, make sure they have addressed everything you want decided. If they did not, politely ask the judge about it. It may help to have a checklist with you before you start, so you can make sure the judge has dealt with all of the issues.

If the judge tells you that you must give notice to the other party before the Court will hear your application, go to the Resolution Services office and the staff can give you the forms and instructions that you will need.

AFTER COURT

Make sure your Order is filed. It should have a “Clerk of the Court” stamp on the first page. You should also receive 2 certified copies of the Order (and extra copies if there is more than one respondent).

In most cases, you will now have to serve each respondent with:

- a filed copy of your Order;
- a filed copy of your Statement of Claim; and
- a filed copy of your Affidavit.

Unless the judge has made a different order about how to serve, another person over the age of 18 must serve the respondent by hand-delivering the documents directly to the respondent (this is called personal service).

When serving the court documents:

- Do not serve the Restraining Order yourself. Have someone else serve the documents for you – i.e. ask a friend or family member or hire a process server.
- Have whoever is delivering the documents make a note of the address where the respondent is when they hand-deliver the documents;
- Make sure the person that serves the documents knows that they will have to swear an Affidavit of Service.

Tip:

You should think about hiring a process server to serve the respondent for you. You can find one by looking under “Process Servers” in the yellow pages or on www.canada411.ca. Process servers can sometimes help you find the respondent, will serve the court documents, and will complete the Affidavit of Service for you. They do charge a fee for their services.

After you have served your Order, Statement of Claim and Affidavit on the respondent, you have to prepare an Affidavit of Service for each respondent that was served. This is the court form that proves to the court that the other party received these documents.

Your Affidavit of Service must be completed and sworn by the person who served the documents.

The Affidavit of Service will:

- Explain who delivered the documents;
- Say the date the documents were delivered; and
- Say the address of where the respondent was served.

Make 2 copies of each Affidavit of Service. You must be sure to file the original Affidavits of Service at the clerk's office.

Deliver the Order to the Police

It is important that the Restraining Order is properly registered with the police. This makes sure that the police have an accurate record of the Order on their computer system, and are able to act quickly if the order is breached or disobeyed.

Take your remaining certified copy of the Restraining Order, a filed copy of the Affidavits of Service, and the Statement of Description to your local police headquarters or R.C.M.P. detachment.

The addresses for the Restraining Order Registry offices in Edmonton and Calgary are:

The Chief of Police
Edmonton Police Service
9620 - 103A Avenue
Edmonton, Alberta, T5H 0H7
Attention: Case Management Unit

The Chief of Police
Calgary Police Service
5111 – 47 Street NE
Calgary, Alberta, T3J 3R2
Attention: Case Management Unit

If outside of Edmonton or Calgary, you will need to contact the local police or RCMP detachment in your area - consult the phone directory.

You should still have one filed copy of each Affidavit of Service and a certified copy of your Restraining Order. Keep these in your possession at all times while the Order is in effect. The police may want to see it if the Order is breached or disobeyed in the future.

THE NEXT COURT DATE

Because the Restraining Order is made without notice to the respondent, it is important that the court give the respondent an opportunity to respond to the application. For that reason, it is in place only until the "Review Date". The date for the Review is stated in your Restraining Order.

At the Review Date, the judge can grant a Restraining Order that will continue on for a longer period.

You must go to court for the Review, even if you believe the respondent will not be attending.

If the respondent wants to object to the Restraining Order, they will have to file an Affidavit setting out their evidence for the court. They should serve the Affidavit to you by having it delivered to your address for service.

If you want to respond to anything in their Affidavit, you must complete and file a Supplementary Affidavit. Ask us how to do that. You do not have to repeat information that is already in your Affidavit.

If you have filled in an Supplementary Affidavit, have it sworn, make 2 copies (plus an additional copy for each additional respondent) then have it filed at the Queen's Bench filing counter.

You must serve each respondent with your Supplementary Affidavit a reasonable time before court. Again, do not serve the respondent yourself. The person who serves must swear an Affidavit of Service.

At the Review date, the judge will hear arguments from both of you about whether or not the Restraining Order should be renewed. If it is, an Order will be typed up for you by our staff.

If the respondent was not in court, or if they did not stay to receive their copy of the Restraining Order, you must arrange to have them personally served with the Restraining Order.

You must also bring a copy of this Restraining Order and your Affidavit of Service to the police.

If the Respondent disobeys the Restraining order

If the respondent breaches or disobeys the Restraining Order, call the police or RCMP.

If the respondent is arrested as a result of disobeying the Restraining Order, you will be contacted at the telephone number you had provided on the first page of the Restraining Order. You may be required to appear in court to give evidence of the breach. A judge will decide what penalty the respondent will face.

As the applicant, you must not contact the respondent or allow the respondent into your home while the Restraining Order is in effect. The Restraining Order is directed toward the respondent, so it is not revoked if you do contact the respondent. However, these circumstances make it difficult to enforce the Restraining Order. And, it may make it harder to obtain a Restraining Order in the future, especially if no further threats or violence occur during this contact.

Terminating, Varying or Extending the Restraining Order

You will have to make a further court application if:

- you decide that you no longer want or need the Restraining Order to be in effect,
- you want to have the Restraining Order continue for a longer period, or
- you want to change what the Restraining Order says.

Should you hire a lawyer?

The staff at the court house cannot give you legal advice and cannot do your work for you.

Lawyers can help with steps along the way. They can:

- Tell you about your legal rights and obligations;
- Give you an opinion about what your chances are, or how the judge might decide;
- Tell you which option is the better choice for you;
- Complete the court forms and other necessary paperwork;
- Do legal research to find case law to help convince the judge;
- Tell you which court documents would be helpful to your case;
- Help you decide which facts the judge will want to hear;
- Negotiate with the other side;
- Rehearse the court hearing with you;
- Represent you in meetings or in court;
- Go to court for you if you can't go yourself;
- Prepare the Order after court;
- Prepare any letters needed as your matter goes through court; and/or
- Prepare any follow up documents.

Tip:

Many lawyers are willing to give “unbundled legal services.” This means that you can choose which steps the lawyer will do and which steps you will do yourself. If you are interested in this, talk to a lawyer about how unbundled legal services can work in your case.

In many locations, Duty Counsel may be available at court. The Duty Counsel program is funded by Legal Aid. The Duty Counsel Lawyers (or students) will speak with you just before court begins, and will help you present your case to the judge. If both parties do not have a lawyer, Duty Counsel will present both sides to the judge. If the judge tells you to take other steps, Duty Counsel will explain those to you after court and tell you where you need to go for more help.

You should hire a lawyer if:

- You don't want to or can't do the paperwork yourself;
- You don't want to or can't make several trips to the courthouse during business hours;
- You will have problems speaking for yourself in the court hearing; or
- The judge recommends to you that you hire a lawyer.

The Court File

The court keeps a file folder with all of the court documents that have been filed in your case. That folder is labeled with a court file number (or action number). You must put the court file number on all of your court forms, so that they can be properly filed.

If you need to get copies of any of the documents on your court file, you can ask for them. You will be charged $10 to pull the file, plus $1 per page for photocopying. If you want a certified copy of any of the court documents, there will be an extra $10 fee.

You must ask for the copies of the court documents from the court where your file is located. For example, if your court file is in Red Deer, you must make your request for copies of the documents to the courthouse in Red Deer.

Other provinces' courts also keep court files, and will give you copies of court documents if you ask. Their fees may be different. If you are asking for a copy of an Order from another province, always ask for a certified copy.

Tip:

A certified copy of a court form has a stamp on it saying that it is a certified (or true) copy of the original. It is signed by a court official under the stamp. To be a certified copy, the copy must have this original stamp and signature.
