Queen's Counsel appointments announced

Alberta lawyers honoured for outstanding contributions

Edmonton - Alberta's Minister of Justice and Attorney General, Alison Redford, Q.C., has announced the appointment of 105 lawyers as Queen's Counsel. The honorary title recognizes members of the Alberta bar for their contributions to the legal profession and their communities.

"This designation recognizes outstanding expertise, work and contributions in a lawyer's public life," said Justice Minister Alison Redford. "It's a longstanding tradition and highly esteemed in the legal community."

Candidates are screened by a committee of judicial officials and legal professionals. Recommendations for appointment are then submitted to the Minister and Cabinet. Recipients for 2009 include lawyers from both the public and private sector who have practiced in communities across the province.

In Alberta, the Lieutenant Governor in Council appoints the Queen's Counsel recipients. Traditionally, the appointments are made every second year.
